The title, and some of the most valuable thoughts of the Introduction, were suggested to me by one whose aid I acknowledge with a gratitude that extends backward to the time when I had the rare privilege of listening to words of instruction both from his lips, and from those of his honored father, whose memory is cherished by all his pupils with the fondness of a child's affection for a beloved parent. I refer to the Rev. J.A. Alexander, D.D., to whom the church may hereafter be as largely indebted in the department of ecclesiastical history, if his life be spared, as it is now in that of exegesis.
