Reviews

*This pdf might be well worth a study, and a lot better than other. It really is simplistic but excitement inside the fifty percent in the book. Its been printed in an exceedingly straightforward way which is just after i finished reading this ebook through which really modified me, modify the way i believe.

Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .of haemorrhages, which changes are most noticeable in the upper part, though no portion of the fundus is free. Right eye shows similar changes, commencing in lower temporal veins, beginning at 2--3 optic disc diameters from the optic disc, and extending to the extreme peripheral radicles, with similar changes in the upper temporal vein; the changes referred to were: (a) white cotton-like deposit on the coats of the vessels, (6) some haemorrhages, (c) a black spot amongst the upper temporal radicals. The disease was diagnosed as phlebitis of the terminal radicles, gradually spreading in the direction of the blood current and leading to thrombosis. After some months treatment at Wiesbaden, the patient returned with no perception of light in the left eye. In December 1903, the eye became irritable, and showed signs of iridocyclitis, and the patient felt ill in himself; so that on December 14th the eye was removed with immediate and marked improvement in the general condition. The pathological examination, conducted by Mr. Coats, showed a layer of dense vascular tissue on the anterior surface of the iris with blocked angle. The ciliary body was atrophic; the retina was degenerated, and on the vitreous surface there was a large quantity of delicate vascular connective tissue, evidently of old standing, which by its contraction had pulled the retina into folds. Some polymorphonuclear leucocytes in part of the retina indicated recent inflammatory reaction; and while most of the retinal vessels were partly or wholly obliterated, others...
