If one may judge by the interest manifested at the meeting last year of The International Society of Surgery, in Brussels, there was no topic which men discussed more actively nor more interestedly than prostatectomy, while the three hundred surgeons present seemed equally divided in opinion as to the respective merits of the two routes. It is not proposed to go into this question here, but simply to record the fact that to-day there is scarcely a topic in surgery which evokes greater interest. It was the work done by Otis upon the normal caliber of the urethra, which led to the perfection by Bigelow of his method of litholapaxy, or evacuation by crushing in one sitting of vesical calculi. Until he introduced his large tubes for the purpose, this had not been practicable, not at least in a large proportion of cases. Bigelow s methods have not been improved upon within the past twenty-five years, thus constituting a notable exception to the work and the procedures of most surgeons. If one may be permitted to refer to text-book work the number of books published by American surgeons within the later decades, especially of the past century, is something more than memorable--it has become almost appalling. These works are not alone text-books for the student,...
