If, therefore, the voting systems generally used throughout the country hitherto can be shown to be gravely defective and to be easily replaceable by correct systems, we have at once the explanation of some of the worst political evils from which we suffer and the key to political reform that is truly fundamental. And if every voter were allowed to express his will on the ballot at the election itself fully instead of limitedly, adequately instead of inadequately, primaries would not be needed to cut down the number of candidates before the final election. The only adequate ballot, of course, is what is usually...
