In every age men have struggled incessantly against suffering, and striven to solve the deep mystery that it presents, but, apart from the solution given by Christianity, no satisfactory explanation of it has ever been discovered. Some deny the very existence of pain, although it is folly to do so, and such a denial is due to pride, wounded by its own inability to understand and account for the suffering that presents itself on every side. Others-and they are more numerous try to avoid suffering, and do all in their power to escape it; but they never succeed, and only add fresh burdens to those already laid upon them. Others, again, have recourse to all possible distractions, hoping thus to forget their troubles, yet, sooner or later, they are forced to acknowledge the futility of all their efforts. The key to the mystery is supplied by Christianity alone, which does not deny the existence of suffering, but reveals the purpose that it is intended to serve, so that pain, when stripped of all that might mislead or deceive us, is transformed in our sight, and we realize the sublime dignity conferred upon the sufferer, and, having come to regard sorrow as a messenger sent by God in His mercy, we welcome it and even love it. For nearly two thousand years a countless multitude have not only accepted suffering with willingness, but have sought it and prayed for it, as the reward for their labours in Gods service. Those who are unfamiliar with the practice of our religion are astonished that anyone can desire to suffer, and regard this desire as a mark of fanaticism or folly. From...
